Sharon Lin, Assistant Director, Prospect Research, Yale School of Management

Sharon graduated from Yale in 1999 with a B.S. in Biology. She joined the Office of Development research team in January 2012 after doing leukemia research in the Yale Center of Excellence in Molecular Hematology and the Departments of Laboratory Medicine and Pathology. Previously, she lived in Beijing, where she taught English and American culture at Tsinghua University. At Yale, she was a coxswain for the men’s lightweight crew, a sports editor and football reporter for The Yale Herald, and a proud member of Timothy Dwight College. Outside of work, Sharon spends her early mornings and weekends coxing the men’s sweep program at the New Haven Rowing Club on the Housatonic River. In 2007, she appeared on Jeopardy! and defeated IBM’s Watson computer in early-round testing two years later. She also serves as an Alumni Schools Committee interviewer, and is an avid supporter of the Boston Red Sox and local food trucks. She would like to know if you are going to finish that ham.
